Whitmer again looking to rob teacher retirement to fund unsustainable programs

Rep. Meerman today shared his disappointment with the governor's recent proposal to divert $670 million from the Michigan Public School Employee's Retirement System (MPSERS), which is currently $30 million in debt.

"The governor's plan to divert $670 million in MPSERS payments is irresponsible and just more of the political theatrics we have already seen from her," Meerman said. "We owe it to taxpayers to clean our debt and commit to proper use of their dollars so future Michiganders are not on the hook for even more money. This proposal is careless and demonstrates the governor's continued commitment to her political future over the future of Michigan."

In May, Meerman introduced HB 4692 that would have paid down the MPSERS debt by $1 billion using a portion of the state's historic budget surplus that totaled nearly $9 billion. The Office of Retirement Services estimated that MPSERS payment would have saved taxpayers $1.5 billion overall. Meerman was a strong advocate for paying down the debt so that more money could go directly toward educating students.

"Never has our state had such a surplus of funds as we have in the budget presented to us today," Meerman said during a House floor speech in June. "This budget vote is a chance for us as a state to make investments in the futures of our children and grandchildren, and a wise chance for us to setup our schools for years of success."

Unfortunately, his proposal never gained any attention from the House Appropriations Committee, and an amendment to allocate the same funding was not accepted in the School Aid and Michigan Department of Education Appropriations Subcommittee.

"Gov. Whitmer is choosing to set our state further back so she can fund her pet projects and score some positive headlines in the press," Meerman said.

State Rep. Luke Meerman voted against legislation passed by House Democrats today to divert resources that were intended to pay down teacher retirement debt, a move that could jeopardize Michigan's state finances.

House Bill 5803 would reduce contributions to the health care system for retired school employees, instead of allowing health care savings to go toward paying down pension debt. The overall retirement system still owes more than $30 billion in unfunded liabilities.

House Bills 5571-76 make extensive changes to the petition process used for certain elections in Michigan, including nomination petitions, ballot proposals, constitutional, and initiative petitions.

"Give the democrats a gavel and they will pull out every stop to cater to their union friends and stakeholders," Meerman said. "From union symbols and links to websites on petitions, it's a bold way of informing the people who writes their laws and the Legislature should not further relinquish its lawmaking authority."
