Tesla, the technology company led by Elon Musk, has announced new job offers to work from home (telecommuting) from anywhere in the world, something that has been implemented since the pandemic. The offer has in addition to remote work good working conditions and salaries and, is that the company will pay a salary of up to $ 270,000.

These are not the only vacancies Tesla has posted. A few days ago, Musk's company announced that it was looking for personnel to test and train its humanoids with artificial intelligence. For these vacancies they offered a salary of over $6,000, but a number of specific requirements had to be met.

Job openings at Elon Musk's company

One of the most prominent vacancies is that of Senior Engineer, a position that requires significant experience in the commissioning of electrical and photovoltaic systems. The position requires at least 5 years of experience in commissioning or performance testing of large-scale power systems, such as photovoltaic and storage systems.

Experience as an Electrical Commissioning Technician or Field Engineer is a strong plus. In addition, these requirements must be met:

- Proficiency in transformer testing and balance of plant equipment.
- Familiarity with SCADA protocols such as DNP3, GOOSE and Modbus.
- Working knowledge of Windows and Linux operating systems is a plus, as well as experience with devices such as relays, meters, and managed Ethernet switches.

The mode of work is completely remote, allowing the flexibility to work from any global location, although availability to travel is expected depending on the needs of the project.

Tesla offers an annual salary ranging from $79,200 to $270,000, depending on the candidate's position and experience.
